Name Meaning

Noe

Joseph

German, Dutch, and English (London); French and Spanish (Noë); Catalan (Noé); from the Biblical personal name Noach "Noah", which means "comfort" in Hebrew. According to the Book of Genesis, Noah, having been forewarned by God, built an ark into which he took his family and representatives of every species of animal, and so was saved from the flood that God sent to destroy the world because of human wickedness. The personal name was not common among non-Jews in the Middle Ages, but the Biblical story was an extremely popular subject for miracle plays. In many cases, therefore, the surname probably derives from a nickname referring to someone who had played the part of Noah in a miracle play or pageant, rather than from a personal name. The usual English form of the surname is Noy .

MORE

French (Noël): habitational name from La Noël, the name of several places in the northern part of France, derived from the Gaulish word nauda "water meadow, boggy place"; it is a cognate of Noue (see Lanoue ) and, in North America, possibly also an altered form of this.

MORE

French (Noël): variant of Noël (see Noel ).
